NEWARK THE DISCOURAGED

Prize Jubilee Week Attracts Tremendous Crowds.

100,000 ON OCTOBER 12th.

The President of the Great Drawing Company
What He Said in a Quite Lengthy
Address to the Great Crowd.

The great feature of the Trans-Mississippi exposition on the 12th was the visit of the president of the United States, who spent the entire day on the grounds. Soon after the arrival of the nation's chief executive was conducted to the Plaza, and after the inspection by the president, the first Methodist church Omaha, spoke to the vast assembly as follows:

Gentlemen of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition, I am glad to see you here with genuine pleasure that I share with the people of Omaha, whose wealth of welcome is not warm hearts have been beating for you. For this renewed manifestation of your regard and for the cordial reception of today my heart responds with profound thanks and deep appreciation which I cannot express and which the language of compliment is inadequate to convey. My greeting is not alone to you and the state of Nebraska, but to the people of the states of the Trans-Mississippi group participating here, and I cannot without congratulations on the evidence of your great success. It is my duty to establish the fact that their place has not been deserted, and that their property is again with them. It is found here. This picture depicts all doubt.

In the age of expositions they have added yet another magnificent example of the past, and in influence they still live, and their influence is being closely intertwined with our national development. Similar rewards will be given to the authors and patrons of the Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition. Their contribution will mark another epoch in the nation's material advancement.

One of the great laws of life is progress, and progress has the principles of this law been so strikingly illustrated as in the United States. A century and a decade of our national life have turned into a magnificent, unbroken experiment into demonstration, revolutionized old methods and won new triumphs which have challenged the attention of the world. The truth is not only of the accumulation of material wealth and advance in education, science, invention and manufactures, but also in the opportunities to the people for their own elevation, which have been secured by wise free government.

Heretofore, in peace and in war, with additions to the number of our citizens, changes in our laws, we have steadily enforced the spirit of the constitution secured to us by the noble self-sacrifice and far-sighted wisdom of our ancestors. We have avoided the temptations of conquest in the spirit of gain. With an increasing love for the truth, and with the progress of our people, we have made the triumph of our system of government in the progress and the prosperity of our people as an inspiration to the whole human race. Confirmed by the fact that new and grave problems, we must recognize that their solution will affect not ourselves alone, but others of the family of nations.

In this age of frequent interchange and mutual dependency, we cannot shrink our international responsibilities. If we would, that we be guided by courage and wisdom and we must follow duty even if it desire opposes. No deliberation can be too mature, or self-control too constant in this solemn hour of our history. We must avoid the temptation of undue aggression, and aim to secure only such results as will promote our own and the general good of the world.

It has been said by some one that the normal condition of nations is war. That is not true of the United States. We never enter upon war until every effort for peace without it has been exhausted. Ours has never been a military government. Peace, with whose blessings we have been so singularly favored, is the national desire, and the goal of every American aspiration.

On the 25th of April, for the first time for centuries, a general assembly of the United States sounded the call to arms. The banners of war were unfurled; the best and bravest from every section responded; a mighty host of patriots rolled, the north and the south with each other in patriotic devotion; science was invoked to furnish its most effective weapons; factories were called to supply the needs of the nation; and veteran soldiers in freely offering their services to their country, volunteers and regulars and all the people rallied to the support of the Union. There was no break in the line, no halt in the march, no fear in the heart. No resistance to the patriotic impulse as home, no lack of spirit, no lack of the patriotic spirit of the troops fighting in distant waters or on a foreign shore.

What a wonderful experience it has been from the standpoint of patriotism and achievement! The storm broke so suddenly that it was almost before we realized it. Our navy was too small, though furnished with the most modern equipment and most fortunate in its trained officers and sailors. Our army had years ago been reduced to a peace footing with the most available troops when the war was declared, but the account which officers and men gave of themselves on the battlefields has large measure of the manhood was there and everywhere. American patriotism was there and its resources were limitless. The consequences of an invincible spirit of the people proved glorious and those who were a little more than a third of a century ago divided and at war with each other were again united under the holy banner of the Union. Patriotism banished party feeling; $50,000,000 for the national defense was appropriated without debate or division, as a matter of course, and only a mere indication of our mighty reserve power.

But if this is true of the beginning of the war, what can we say of it now, with hostilities suspended, and peace near at hand, as we fervently hope? Matchless in its results: Unparalleled in its speed; every thoughtful man feels the weight of responsibility which has been so suddenly thrust upon us. And above all
